Broker opportunities with Temple Legal Protection

The real value your customers get from insurance crystallises when a problem arises. Right now there are many businesses looking to make a claim but the legal and financial protection they expect may not be there when it is needed most.

We're here to help you help your clients with guidance on how legal expenses insurance can be truly effective; we're not here to add to predictions of a Covid-19 related 'tidal wave', 'tsunami' or 'timebomb' of litigation.

We are currently seeing a significant increase in legal disputes, many more calls to our legal (and counselling) helplines and more legal claims. We also see an increasing number of businesses who have a problem, but do not have the cover for their legal expenses.

This likely includes your customers facing costly legal battles at the worst possible time - while revenue and earnings are down. This can have a catastrophic impact on their business and its future. They may be more concerned about the 'expense' element of legal expenses insurance, less so the real benefits of having the right insurance?

Budgets are tight, but the risks of not being covered is now in sharp focus. But we can help. Discussions and surveys we've conducted among brokers tell us what the issues are. If legal expenses insurance could be the answer - then it's time to read our guide to LEI.

Frequently asked questions

Let's start with quick answers to some common questions

What is legal expenses insurance?

Legal protection or legal expenses insurance (LEI) is a form of insurance that funds the cost of legal advice and legal proceedings including solicitors, barristers and expert witnesses. It is also known as 'Before The Event' legal expenses insurance, as it refers to purchasing insurance before the claim or problem (the event) arises.

What legal expenses insurance isn't

It is not just something added on to a core element of cover. Your perceived value of a standalone LEI policy may be low, but do remember the time to have the right cover is right now.

What is typically covered?

Heads of cover usually included are Employment Defence, Contractual Disputes, Taxation Defence, Legal Defence and Property Disputes, Personal Injury plus a range of additional covers.

How much cover is available?

Cover for businesses typically ranges from £25,000 to £100,000 per claim, with some providers (including Temple Legal Protection) offering up to £250,000.

Other assistance that may be offered

- Policies including free 24-hour legal advice from legal experts
- Free confidential telephone counselling included

Key conditions - examples include

- Legal issues must have over 50% prospects of being successful
- Clients must follow legal advice on employment issues
- The cost to pursue a claim must be less than the amount disputed
- Issues that pre-date the insurance are not covered

Why your customers need LEI

8 reasons why your customers should buy legal expenses insurance (LEI)

1. Economic recession resulting in company restructuring, redundancies and more employment disputes
2. The majority of businesses in the UK have more than 4 legal issues a year
3. The estimated cost of legal disputes for SME's is over £13bn a year
4. April 2018 to March 2019 saw 121,111 employment tribunal claims applications
5. The highest employment tribunal award was £947,585
6. LEI cover typically includes a free legal advice line
7. LEI minimum premium is usually less than the cost of 1 hour with a solicitor
8. At any one time 1 in 10 SMEs are being investigated by HMRC to detect 'counter-avoidance'

If you don't buy LEI - here's 7 reasons why you should

1. There is a significant chance your customer might need it in the near future
2. Separate LEI policies are likely to provide wider cover than LEI add-on policies
3. It's too late to buy it once there is an issue, which could lead to your client changing brokers
4. An extra income stream, with decent commission
5. Wider cover reduces customer complaints
6. Less complaints and more cover/assistance improves client retention
7. Stand out against competitors who aren't offering LEI cover

If we have one top tip, it is this - contact your commercial customers and prospects before their renewal date and ask a few questions about their existing cover to make sure it's what they will need in the future.

Employment

The insured, having lost a large contract, had to restructure and make 8 employees redundant. Via a 24-hour legal advice line they liaised with employment law experts provided free of charge with the Temple policy. After consulting all their staff, they completed a selection process for the planned redundancies.

Shortly after, one of the employees brought an employment tribunal claim against the insured for unfair selection, sexual discrimination and disability discrimination.

The insured, who was unaware of any disability, appointed a solicitor provided as part of their Temple policy to defend the tribunal claim and to assist with an internal investigation into any discrimination.

The now ex-employee was not initially represented by a solicitor, which resulted in a great deal more work for our solicitor in explaining the process and fielding many questions and allegations.

The case was booked for a 3 day hearing, during which the solicitor was able to evidence the selection criteria and scoring system adopted and show the full consultation process carried out. The tribunal dismissed the case on the first day, finding in the insured's favour.

It is very rare to recover costs in an employment claim; the costs of the defence, including barristers fees of £15,300 for this matter were covered by the Temple legal expenses insurance policy.

Taxation

Company X received notification from HMRC that they would be subject to an investigation of their taxes, following concerns with their VAT returns and an additional £17,000 in unpaid taxes due.

Temple covered the cost of the insured's accountant to prepare for the investigation, liaise with HMRC throughout the process and successfully evidenced that the company had acted correctly, resulting in no additional tax due.

Legal Defence

Following an anonymous complaint accusing a business with a Temple LEI policy of not carrying out legionella tests, the insured, responsible for a mixed-use property, then received notice from the local authority of investigation and potential legal action, with the threat of a large fine.

Temple helped the insured appoint a local solicitor to respond to the notice, rejecting the accusation. With the evidence of tests carried out as well as additional safety checks also completed they were able to show the insured had acted correctly.

Further legal action was not required, the local authority accepted the solicitors' response and the case closed, with no fines or further investigation.

The solicitor's fees and expert reports costs of £7,300 were covered by the LEI policy.

Property

Company X, through a previous business acquisition and merger of two sites, found themselves with a building temporarily unoccupied, prior to planned improvements later in the year.

The business, who had Temple legal expenses insurance cover, became aware squatters had moved into the empty property and reported this to the local police. Unfortunately squatting in commercial properties is not a criminal offence and the police were not able to assist.

Temple arranged for an experienced property solicitor to urgently obtain a court order to evict the squatters.

Once this had happened, Company X was able to secure the property and install security cameras and lighting to prevent further problems.

Contract Disputes

The insured had their office refurbished by an external contractor. The work was completed to a very poor standard, with elements remaining unfinished.

The contractor refused to correct the substandard work or finish the outstanding items, leaving the insured no option but to arrange for another firm to put right the work and complete the remaining elements.

Temple arranged for a solicitor to be appointed who helped the insured sue the contractor for damages and compensation - seeking over £14,000. The insured eventually accepted £12,500 in an out of court settlement, in addition to £2,000 towards legal costs.

The remaining solicitor's fees and disbursements of £3,700 were covered by the Temple LEI policy.

Loss Adjusters Fees

Company Y owned a number of residential properties. They suffered a fire at one of their high-end, fully-furnished properties.

The fire caused significant damage, both to the property and its contents; initial conversations with their insurance company raised concerns whether they would be able to make a full financial recovery.

Temple were able to appoint an expert loss adjuster who prepared and managed the claim for the company, allowing them to get on with running their business.

The loss adjuster was able to recover over £600,000 - reimbursing their loss and restoring the property.

Their fees of £5,700 were covered by the Temple insurance policy.

Here at Temple we have been providing legal protection insurance in the UK for over 20 years and have a wealth of knowledge and expertise in both the commercial and personal sectors.

The repercussions from the business interruption test case have probably not helped insurers or customers confidence in the industry. The exposed gap between customer expectation at a time when they are desperate for support, in almost unimaginable conditions, and policy cover, exclusions and wording interpretation.

We're not here to add to that. But what is certain the right time to have the right cover is right now. Legal expenses insurance can be the protection your commercial customers need; especially with the unprecedented levels of uncertainty around at present - a worldwide pandemic, rapidly changing legislation, economic downturn, political upheaval, uncertainty over Brexit - the list goes on.

However, as with most insurances, you can't buy cover for a problem you already have or are aware of. So cancelling at renewal, or sticking to 'core' insurance covers to save costs, then looking for cover when an issue arises, really can be an expensive mistake! After-the-event legal expenses insurance is an option but is not so widely available for many commercial disputes.

At this time brokers have never been more important, for two reasons -

- The number of businesses unaware of a significant exposure and lack of legal protection is a growing, but little considered, concern. You can increase awareness and add value by raising this with the customer.
- Provide the client with the option to switch to a wider policy cover and an insurer focussed on assisting the customer. Ensure that legal claim is covered before it arises!

There has never been a more important time for the right advice for business customers - and for them to have access to insurance-backed legal advice. This will only happen if they have the right insurance cover in place.

You also want to rely on a claims process that gives peace of mind, rather than wanting to give the insurer a piece of your mind - resolve these potential future problems for your customer and see them become an advocate for your business.

Temple Legal Protection is one of the country's leading underwriters of legal expenses insurance. We provide a wide range of insurance solutions to brokers and law firms in order to help people reduce their financial risks in litigation.
